

Downtown, Clarksville, VA

Town of yesteryear

Remember what it was like to spend your days outside of the malt-shop or general store excited about spending some of your hard earned income on "goodies"? During the evenings, you could stroll, socialize, and converse with friends and family in a warm, comfortable town setting.

Could you ever get that back?

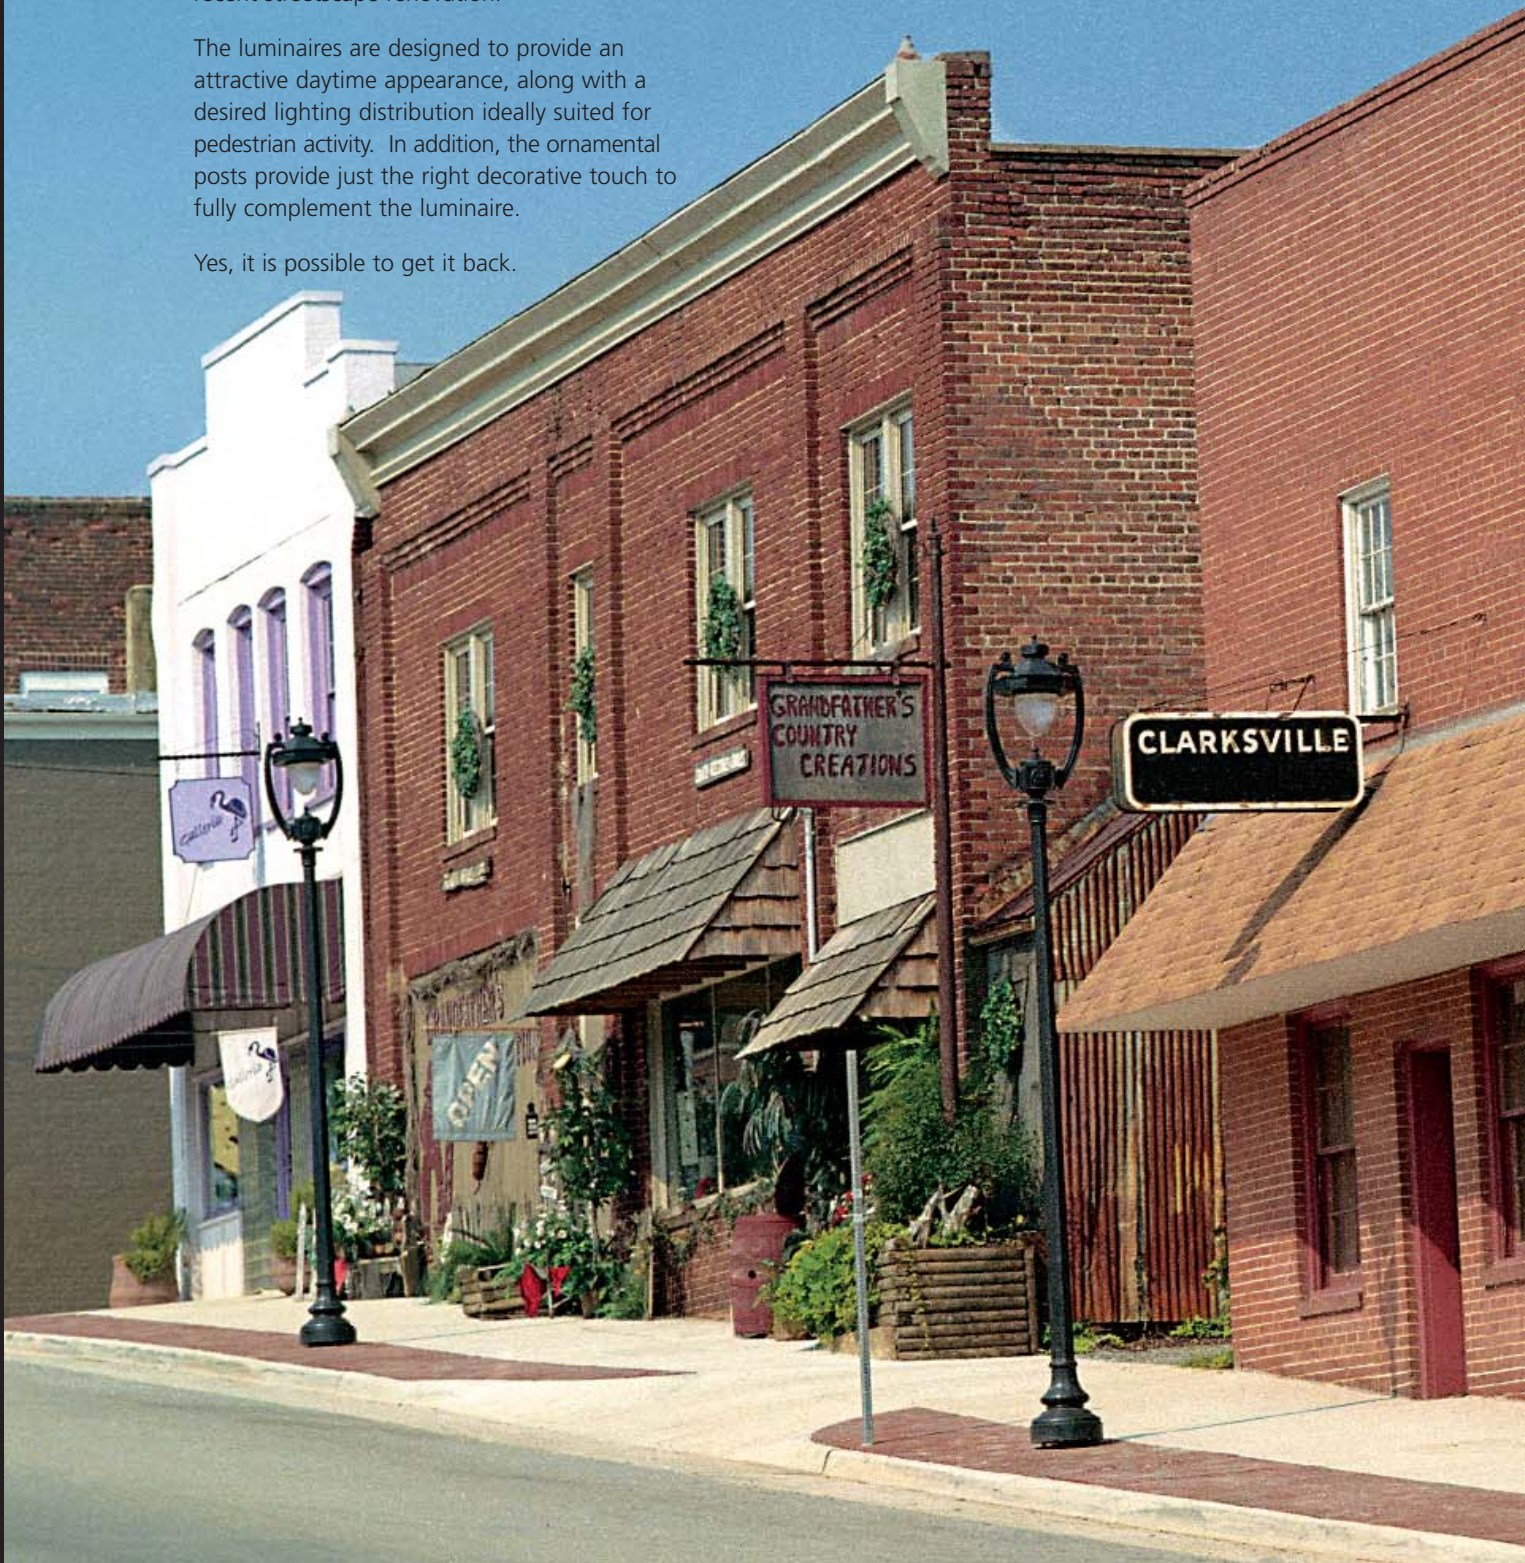

Harp Series featuring glass optics on a Wadsworth ornamental post

These are the days

Although times have changed and memories are more distant, there are some of those elements that can remain - an inviting, lively, warm place where folks can gather safely and securely. That is precisely why the proud town of Clarksville, VA elected to relight its downtown with traditional Holophane Harp luminaires and Wadsworth ornamental posts for a recent streetscape renovation.

The luminaires are designed to provide an attractive daytime appearance, along with a desired lighting distribution ideally suited for pedestrian activity. In addition, the ornamental posts provide just the right decorative touch to fully complement the luminaire.

Yes, it is possible to get it back.
